SALUTATIO.

For the past few days we have been wondering what we should write for the "KALEIDOSCOPE," and now, at the last moment, we are no further advanced than at the beginning. We suppose the Salutatio is expected to be something—well, "high-toned"—for want of a better word, and we just now tried to write something "high-toned," but were clogged by the old conventional terms found in every editorial.

We have a thought now, we won't be "high-toned"—we will just say: "Here is the KALEIDOSCOPE. We have tried to get out a good number, free from errors. Be kind in your criticism—and all our patrons have our thanks. And really, readers, we hope you will find this number a true picture, a "glimpse" of student life at "Old Midd."

Four Years--What Now?

It is a hard task this of climbing a mountain. How one toils and pants, puffs and sweats. That was a risky scramble we had just now. Your head swims and your body shivers at the thought of falling down, down into the rocky bed of that mountain stream? I don't wonder; so does mine. Ugh! it was rather ugly. I wonder if the fear isn't as bad as the reality would be. What's that upon your hand, man? Blood? Ay, so it is. You must have hurt yourself climbing that rough cliff yonder. Well! never mind trifles. Excelsior and no blubbering 's the motto of every earnest man. See, we've almost reached the summit. But stop a moment, this bed of moss is too inviting to pass it by. Let us rest ourselves under the shelter of this ragged birch. Who would say that this country stretched before us, glorified by the rising sun, was that through which we have just passed? Mark how skilfully nature hides her hideous scars, her frightful precipices and her reeking swamps or makes them conspire to enhance her beauty. That dense field of brambles which we have such good cause to remember, gemmed with a million dewdrops sparkles like the crowns of the redeemed. The brawling treacherous brook, silent now, hangs like a rift of mist along the mountain side, and to the right only the farms and meadows of the lowlands are in sight. So distance fain would cheat the senses into falsehood.

But look up! What see you rising over the mountain? The gold and purple of the morning—the first smiles of an unvexed day? God grant no clouds may dim its splendor.

JUNIOR CLASS.
'77.

Vincit, qui se vincit.

Did you ever notice a boy, in the winter time, dragging a sled up a long, steep hill? Have you watched him till he reached the top and turned his sled round? And, best of all, have you seen that smile of ecstatic joy that beams from his countenance as he takes his seat and feels that he has started on the downward track? We are that boy! That happiness is ours.

Two long years have we dragged a heavy sled up the hill. Now we are at the summit and that sled is going to carry us through the rest of our journey, swiftly, on polished shoes.

Give us the pencil of Michael Angelo (a noted artist,) to paint the satisfaction on a student's countenance as he first takes a Junior's seat. No longer a Freshie, to be laughed at for his greenness. No longer a brawling Sophomore, expected to be up to any amount of "deviltry." Not yet a Senior, compelled to walk on eggs to support his dignity. We look through nature and art to find a simile to express the contentment of a Junior, and find it nowhere.

And then, too, the ladies dote on Juniors. There's no use denying this blissful fact. And a Junior is just fitted to be a lady's man. He doesn't walk on her dress, as a Freshman does, his lungs are not too much for her, as a Sophomore's are, he isn't continually conversing on the ratiocination of incommensurability as a Senior is. But,

> "He is gallant and gay, he is tender and true,
> And the will of his lady he loveth to do.
> At her bidding he goeth, to come at her call,
> And the glance of her eye recompenseth for all."

And so we are happy as the days go swiftly on, and we pity the busy, careworn world that knows nothing of the pleasures that belong to the Junior year. Yet, even we look forward and see dimly the life that is before us, and we are willing to take our place in its busy scenes and bear our part of its cares and troubles, hoping and trusting that we shall receive also our portion of its success.

SOPHOMORE CLASS.

Facilis Descensus Averni,--Extremum Occupet Scabies.

WHEN first the halls of Midd. echoed to our tread, we were not what now we are. We mean not to imply by this assertion, that we stood in a lower social condition.

In the College world we were men whose light was hidden under the bushel, but now with our lamps freshly trimmed and burning, we appear before you—bearers of the torch and wearers of the mask—Freshmen no longer!

The few corners that protruded have been rounded off—and now, intelligent, apt and studious, we shine not with a false or borrowed light. Our lamps, once dimmed by the thought of being Freshmen, now shine the brighter for those Freshman jolts and jostles.

Our class is a glorious one, as a whole. It is a glorious one individually. It is needful to make this assertion, to explain what will shortly follow, and to explain why we are such a blessing to the College—such a paragon of Sophomorism.

Somewhat more than a year ago, all were surprised to see, upon the horizon of the College world, a new star of unparalleled brightness. What was it and where did it come from?

Some conjectured one thing, some another. Some said it was caused by the comet—others said that the transit of Venus had produced it. All agreed that it was a star of the first magnitude—outshining all others.

The students themselves, having gazed long and carefully at it, having consulted with all the noted astronomers, at last made the discovery that it was the glorious class of '78.

'78, thy star has risen! It has driven away the mists of Bourdon. It has parted the clouds concealing the Bandusian fount—may it always thus, with undimmed brilliancy, shine, a light to the world.

FRESHMAN CLASS.

Vita sine literis, Mors est.

The class of '79 is pre-eminently a class of the future. We number ten. We might have numbered more, were it not for the indefatigable zeal of our honorable Professors in ascertaining the negative knowledge of certain "would be" Freshmen.

'Tis true our number is small, but ten true hearts, united by the bond of friendship are of untold power. The wide future of college life lies before us, and with unhesitating minds and trusting hearts we commit ourselves to the strong arms and tender care of our beloved Alma Mater.

Our days of adversity (?) are being quickly numbered with the past, but each struggle leaves us with truer hearts and nobler purposes. We look neither to the right hand nor to the left, but press forward toward the goal of a perfect manhood. "Steady" is our watchword; "victory" is our battle-cry, and the embattlements of truth swing wide their golden gates to receive the conqueror.

Terms of Admission.

For admission to the Freshman Class, candidates are examined in the following studies:

Latin Grammar, including the Rules of Prosody and Scanning; Cæsar's Commentaries, four books, or Sallust's Conspiracy of Catiline; Cicero, six orations, including the four against Catiline; Virgil, the Bucolics, and six books of the Æneid; Arnold's Latin Prose Composition, to the VIIth Chapter.

Greek Grammar; Xenophon's Anabasis, three books; Homer's Iliad, two books.

Ancient and Modern Geography.

Arithmetic; Algebra to Equations of the Second Degree, and three books of Loomis' Geometry.

Real equivalents will be accepted in place of any of the Latin or Greek authors named above.

Greater familiarity with the contents of the Latin and Greek Grammars than is usually found in candidates is desirable, in order to accomplish successfully the subsequent course of study.

Students may be admitted to an advanced standing, provided that, in addition to the requisites for admission to the Freshman Class, they are found, on examination, thoroughly acquainted with the several studies of the class which they propose to join. Candidates for such standing should, however, be informed that in consequence of the thorough discipline of the first College year, and the exactness of knowledge which is required of classes, no one can hope, if admitted, to maintain a respectable standing, unless he comes with a high degree of previous preparation. Indeed, it is highly important to the unity and completeness of a liberal education, that the students should enter College at the commencement of the course. The disadvantages incurred by those who postpone an entrance to a later period are much more serious than is commonly supposed.

Every student admitted to an advanced standing (with the exception of those who come from other colleges), is required to pay a fee of $5.00, if he enters after the expiration of the Fall Term of the Freshman year; and of $10.00, if after the expiration of the Fall Term of the Sophomore year.

Candidates for admission must bring a certificate of good moral character; and, if from another college, of their regular dismission and good standing. When a young man has been examined and admitted to college, he is required to attend the prescribed exercises, and is subject to the laws of the Institution.
